JUNIOROSTER

- Alley, Don, "Don."—These girls just won't leave me alone.
- Adams, Emerald.—"We do envy the wisdom in your mind."
- Arnone, Albert.—He mourns a mischief that is passed and gone.
- Anderson, Edith.—Excuse me but you talk too much.
- Anderson, Florence, "Floss."—Always fair spoken and persuading.
- Acuff, James J., "Jim."—The only list he ever heads is the "dinky" list.
- Albert, Ruth, "Bert."—Blue eyes, hair of gold, and a smile that won't come off.
- Allen, Otto, "Ott."—They say there are more able men, but I'm from Missouri.
- Babcock, Colton, "Blab."—After every football play he had eleven stories to tell, one to each of the other ten players and one to the coach.
- Badovinac, Mary, "Nick."—She has such a funny laugh; it makes her chin to pucker.
- Beason, Ruth A., "Dutch."—She goes with them all, but she seems to like football heroes best.
- Bates, Ruth, "Bat."—Tall and mighty in her ways.
- Bench, James, "Jim."—We wonder what Jim would do if mischief hadn't been invented.
- Baker, Norman, "Norm."—A more meek fellow there never was.
- Berg, Ingrid, "Ing."—"I thus neglecting the worldly things dedicate my time to the bettering of my mind."
- Broberg, Carl, "Bug."—Wisdom he has, and to his wisdom courage
Temper to that, and unto all success.
- Baird, Marguerite.—"Your mind doth shape itself to its own wants,
And can bear all things."
- Baker, Stanley, "Stan."—"And all may do what hast by this man been done."
- Berkovitz, Bluma, "Berky."—Her fiddle is her best companion.
- Brown, Laurene.—"I never with important air
In conversation overbear my tongue."
